"Getting stuck in the past is like guarding a cemetery."

- Hugo Pratt, Corto Maltese: La ballade de la mer salée

It all happened so fast

I lost myself {even before I knew who I was}

Despised the sunlight my whole life

Despised everything it stood for

But now I am like a plant trapped in a jar begging for the sun {to come and make me alive} just one more time

I was lost

Lost within myself

Fighting the past through my present hoping that the future will never come

It was too achingly beautiful to stay there

My heart ached and yet all I could see was beauty in every part of it

But soon the pain took over the beautiful And all I could do was move on

So I did, or rather I tried to Or maybe I did but the world did not I moved on but everyone else stayed there

Because I was stuck

Stuck between the past and present

Hoping I can have them both

While tearing myself apart

Just to get even the slightest glimpse of it

But in the end

I preferred being stuck cause moving on was something not meant for me

Or maybe I never wanted to EIn the shadows I hide

In introversion's embrace

Behind a smile,

I silently reside

longing for solace and space

In the shadows of this façade,

I yearn to break free,

To emerge from the mask's facade, revealing the real me

Pretty hurts they say but where's the source of this pain?

Could it be that I, in my own way, inflict it and sustain?

It all circles back to "what do they say about me?"

But we're our own murderers causing esteem's injury.

Each day we slay ourselves, in front of the mirror's glare

Altering perfection that already dwells there,

For derived perfection is just a myth in our sight

We don't need others' validation to embrace our own light

You don't have to seek confirmation, gazing in that glass,

Nor do I

or anyone else

have to verify you, en masse,

You are enough

just as you are that's what truly matters,

Embrace your essence,

ignite your soul,

let insecurities scatter.

The society only whispers to shape the thoughts we believe so step out from the shadows, let your authenticity unfurl

Break the chains of self-doubt, it's time to show the world

No longer confined by what they say or perceive

Embrace your uniqueness and let your spirit achieve.
