Mechanical Engg students remodelled car, improves travel safety standards

Five of the passing-out batch of B Tech Mechanical Engineering students at LPU have remodelled and fabricated a pre-existing top-brand old car in perfection.

Believing in the maxim of 'dreams do come true if one fights to get it', LPU students envisioned a project to remodel a pre-existing vehicle. After brainstorming and research work, they finalized 'Tata Nano' as the base vehicle. As they wanted their innovative creation to be sportier in design; they selected it for its engine at the rear end. Moreover, this model was affordable, as well as a challenge also.

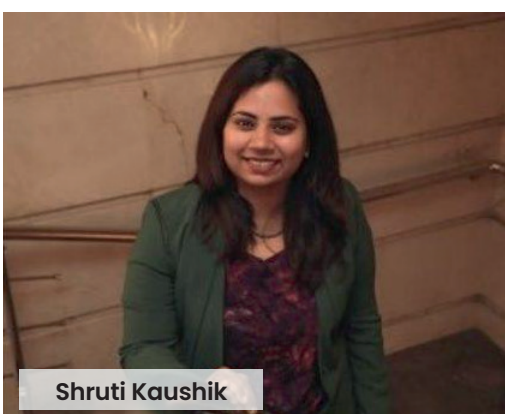

In 4 months of its remodelling time as a 'roll caged chassis';

Tyres got changed from 145 mm width to 205 mm for better traction; to 205 mm for better traction

the design project underwent numerous deformation tests & analyses. It was mounted over 'Tata Nano' base for safety of vehicle and driver. Tyres got changed from 145 mm width to 205 mm for better traction; and, overall performance has now been increased by reducing it in weight. The re-design is both aesthetically pleasing and structurally robust.
